

An illustration of an ostrich in a desert landscape. The ostrich is shown from the side, with its dark feathers and a prominent blue and white plume on its head. The background features rolling sand dunes and several wind turbines under a bright, hazy sky. The overall style is soft and painterly.

The ostrich - the world's largest bird - does not fly but this has not limited its ability to reach out fast and far. Endowed with strong legs for speed, it has astonishing stamina as well, completing a half marathon in a mere 30 minutes.
